"have your say..."

We needed new orthodontic instruments and made the decision to switch to the Medesy range, distributed by Quintess Denta. Having now been using the instruments for a few weeks we are delighted with our decision. Having the ability to make up bespoke kits together with the Gammafix sterilisation tray has made our in house procedures much simpler and everyone prefers the feel of the instruments against our other instruments as well. Overall a good choice with excellent service from Stephen and his team.

How to solve water supply problems:

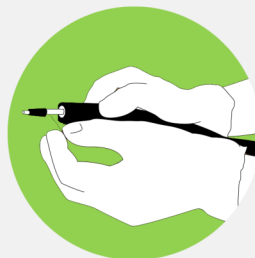

Operate your handpiece to confirm there's no water spray present

Now you'll check the coupling. Remove the coupling from the handpiece, and place it on the water & air supply line. Activate the water supply once more. Be sure to check the water regulator on the coupling to make sure it's in an operational position.

Remove the handpiece and coupling from the tubing / hose

If you encounter no water coming through at this point, you may have a problem with limescale or debris blocking the water port on the coupling. You can usually pick this away yourself, if not it'll have to be sent in for repair.

You should now only have the tubing (water & air supply line) in your hand. Turn on the water to confirm that it is present. If you don't see any water at this point, an engineer will have to be called as the blockage will be in an inaccessible place to fix simply.

Then apply your handpiece to the coupling and water supply. If you find any of the ports on the handpiece are not ejecting water, use a fine wire to try and unblock the ports.

If this process doesn't result in the removal of the blockage from your handpiece, you'll have to send the handpiece in for repair
